

MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

When anyone asks Paul S. Robinson what he does for a living, he tells them he photographs history. With camera in hand, Paul captures memories that preserve the most important events in a person's life. One of his greatest pleasures is when a client sees his photograph and remarks "I didn't see you take that picture". Paul prides himself on his innate ability to capture the true essence of the moment with discrete ease and careful timing. Each shot is carefully thought out with a vision of the end product in mind. Paul is a true professional and expert at his craft, with each image showcasing his abilities.

A South Boston native and Army Veteran, Paul raised three young children while working as a machine mechanic at the Gillette Safety Razor Company. He spent over 20 years in the manufacturing industry before deciding to start his journey in photography.

In 1998, Paul enrolled in the Applied Photography Program at New England School of Photography. The program, a two year curriculum, was completed in just 6 months as Paul went full steam ahead towards his goal, emerging himself in his training. Paul gained an even greater appreciation and admiration for the craft, which is a combination of art and science. He found the chemical reaction of film's exposure to light or an instant image from an electric charge truly fascinating and considers it as 'one of the wonders of the modern world'.

Paul's photographic artistic abilities have taken him on many adventures, including being inside the Hood Blimp while flying over Gillette Stadium, photographing musicians Carlos Santana and Willie Nelson, or baseball legend, David Ortiz, to name a just a few.

Paul is well known for his wedding photography and is the official photographer for The Original Wedding Expo. His pictures appear in Bride and Groom magazine. Paul considers photographing a wedding a very special time in two people's lives and he takes immense pride in creating impressions that will last a lifetime. "To see a person's face when they look at an image, of an emotional moment I created, is very rewarding."

Among his many achievements, Paul has the notable distinction of being one of only 2,000 photographers in the country to have received his Professional Photography Certification through The Professional Photographers of America.

When he is not traveling on location, Paul can be found at his Whitinsville studio, where he specializes in weddings, corporate headshots and events, senior or family portraits, and fashion and model photography. He shares his love of photography through teaching workshops that offer basic and advanced photography.
